WELCOME TO METRO.US

EVA KIS, FEATURES EDITOR

If you're celebrating St. Patrick's Day, let's be real: That probably means one thing, and that thing is drinking green beer. Any self-respecting pub that pulls a pint of normal lager the rest of the year will pull you a green one, but that's not the only way to stay on theme. Check out our guide to the special green food and drinks you can find around the city, and find the most authentic Irish pubs on page 11 or at metro.us.

NYT: MUELLER SUBPOENAS TRUMP ORGANIZATION

Special Counsel Robert Mueller has subpoenaed the Trump Organization for documents, including some related to Russia, The New York Times reported on Thursday, citing two people briefed on the matter. Details of the subpoena were not available, the newspaper said. The Trump Organization, which President Donald Trump ran with his family, played down the significance of any subpoena, with a lawyer saying on Thursday that the company is being cooperative with the special counsel's investigation. The White House declined to comment on the report. "We're going to continue to fully cooperate. Out of respect for the special counsel, we're not going to comment," spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said.

REPORT: TRUMP PLANS TO REMOVE HR MCMASTER

President Donald Trump has decided to replace his national security adviser H.R. McMaster, but the move is not expected to be made immediately, the Washington Post reported on Thursday. Citing five people with knowledge of the plans, the Post said Trump was considering several possible replacements, including former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations John Bolton and Keith Kellogg, the chief of staff of the National Security Council. The White House did not immediately respond to a request from Reuters for comment. On Tuesday, Trump fired Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, and the president has signaled in recent days that a shake-up at the top levels of his administration was not over.

DEATHS REPORTED IN BRIDGE COLLAPSE

3 Miami-Dade Fire Rescue Department personnel and other rescue units work at the scene where a pedestrian bridge collapsed a few days after it was built over southwest Eighth Street in Miami, Florida, on March 15, 2018. Reports indicate that there are an unknown number of fatalities as a result of the collapse.

"Toot toot, hey, beep beep!"

Say those words, and you'll immediately feel the beat, the spirit, the heat of the legendary Donna Summer. Her songs smashed every record. Her story shattered every barrier. Now, the queen arrives on Broadway.

After a twice extended, sold-out run at San Diego's celebrated La Jolla Playhouse, SUMMER, The Donna Summer Musical, begins performances at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre on March 28th.

She was a girl from Boston with a voice from heaven, who shot through the stars from gospel choir to dance floor diva. But what the world didn't know was how Donna Summer risked it all to break through every barrier, becoming the icon of an era and the inspiration for every music diva who followed. From Janet Jackson to Beyoncé, they all began with Donna.

Tony Award® winner LaChanze (The Color Purple), Ariana DeBose (Hamilton, A Bronx Tale) and newcomer Storm Lever each play Donna at different points in her life. Directed by Des McAnuff, the Tony Award®-winning director of Jersey Boys and The Who's Tommy, SUMMER takes us through her tumultuous life and tempestuous loves. Including a mega-watt dream list of musical hits—including "Bad Girls," "MacArthur's Park," "She Works Hard for the Money," and "Last Dance"—SUMMER makes Spring the hottest season of all.

Sláinte! Minibar Delivery sees jump in NYC orders for St. Patrick's Day

Last year, Battery Park, Astoria and Midtown East were the NYC neighborhoods that celebrated St. Patrick's Day the most, according to Minibar Delivery.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

"St. Patrick's Day on a Saturday is the perfect storm for Minibar Delivery. We actually expect the celebrations will kick off on Friday with St. Patrick's Day office parties," Minibar co-founder Lara Crystal said. ISTOCK

Just as many, many revelers will descend upon the city for Saturday's St. Patrick's Day parade and other holiday festivities, many others will avoid the masses and say, "Sláinte!" from the comfort of their own home.

But just because they're staying in doesn't mean they won't want to celebrate the patron saint of Ireland with some of the Emerald Isle's best booze. Just the opposite, in fact, according to new statistics from online alcohol delivery service Minibar.

Last year, Minibar Delivery saw sales for Irish brands increase more than 100 percent across the country, with Jameson jumping 366 percent and beers like Guinness and Harp seeing a 700 percent increase.

Here in New York City, Jameson sales through Minibar Delivery rose 491 percent last year, while Baileys saw a 330 percent increase. On the beer side, Guinness deliveries increased a whopping 1,614 percent — which actually came in second to Smithwick's, which jumped up 1,700 percent.

As Minibar Delivery's order values were 19 percent higher than average last St. Patrick's Day, co-founder Lara Crystal expects to see an even bigger increase this year since the festive holiday falls on arguably the best weekend day.

"St. Patrick's Day on a Saturday is the perfect storm for Minibar Delivery. We actually expect the celebrations will kick off on Friday with St. Patrick's Day office parties," Crystal told Metro. "Saturday will be huge — customers will be ordering earlier and going for more traditional holiday beverages, like Jameson and Guinness."

In 2017, St. Patrick's Day fell on a Friday, and Minibar Delivery stats showed that 35 percent of orders were placed before 3 p.m. On a typical Friday, 20 percent of orders come before 3 p.m.

Battery Park, Astoria and Midtown East were the New York City neighborhoods that celebrated St. Patrick's Day the most last year, according to Minibar Delivery's sales stats.

Minibar Delivery is available in 13 states and Washington, D.C. For more information, visit minibardelivery.com.

Central Park charity run kicks off April 7

WRITTEN BY Amy Smith

As we leave the icy winter months behind and head into spring, most of us are looking for any excuse to get outside. The 20th annual Concern Spring Run is the perfect opportunity to shake off your cabin fever and raise money for a phenomenal cause. This year, more than 1,000 runners and walkers are expected to take to Central Park for the celebrated 4-mile race. The goal? Raising much-needed funds for Concern's humanitarian and long-term development programs, currently in place in 26 high-need countries around the world.

The annual Concern Spring Run is a fun, lighthearted opportunity to get outside, have a good time, and generate life-changing funds for some of the world's poorest communities. Concern directly partners with the world's poorest to help lift them out of poverty for good so that they can live safe, fulfilling lives. This includes providing everything from hurricane recovery in Haiti to psychosocial support in Syria to basic nutrition for hundreds of thousands of Rohingya Muslims in Bangladesh. Their efforts ring true to the values that Concern's founders held so dearly-to do as much as you can, as well as you can, for as many as you can, as long as you can.

This year's Concern Spring Run kicks off on Saturday, April 7 at 9:30 a.m. at 102nd Street and East Drive. The race is open to individuals and friends, as well as corporate teams and bar teams. In fact, the event was originally started by bar and pub owners who sought to use a little friendly competition to raise money for Concern. Two decades later, it has grown into a huge, family-friendly event that attracts runners and walkers of all stripes.

The 2018 fundraising goal is to bring in $120,000, with over 90 percent of every dollar raised going directly to support Concern's programs. This year's defending champion for the annual pub challenge is The Churchill; Mutual of America won last year's corporate challenge. And adding a little extra fun to this year's event is breakfast and a raffle- featuring round-trip JetBlue tickets-held after the race at Two Door Tavern.

Over the last 50 years, Concern has changed the lives of millions of people in need. Their work is devoted to the world's poorest-farmers struggling to grow enough food, mothers lacking basic health care and nutrition for their children, and families forced to flee their homes due to a conflict or natural disaster.

Registration is currently open for the 2018 Concern Spring Run. Visit concernusa.org/springrun to learn more. (You can snag $5 off your registration with promo code: metro.) Together, we can help deliver aid to those who need it most!

Mayor proposes state law changes to keep dangerous drivers off New York City streets

A new proposal regarding road safety came the week after a driver who reportedly has a medical condition ran a red light in Park Slope, killing two small children. ISTOCK

"We need Albany's help to keep dangerous drivers off the road before we lose another life," de Blasio said.

Mayor Bill de Blasio on Thursday proposed state law changes to keep dangerous drivers off city streets, a move that comes on the heels of last week's crash in Park Slope in which two small children were killed by a driver who ran a red light.

The changes he suggests include extending and expanding the speed-enforcement-camera program, upping fines, suspending vehicle registrations of repeat offenders and requiring physicians to alert the DMV of medical conditions or incidents that could cause drivers to lose consciousness or control when behind the wheel.

Dorothy Bruns, the driver in the Park Slope crash, reportedly suffers from medical conditions that cause seizures, which she may have suffered at the time of the incident, causing her to accelerate through the red light.

Additionally, Bruns' license plate had been cited 12 times in the past two years for traffic violations that included four instances of running red lights and four for speeding in school zones. Her license was suspended the day after the crash.

"In the wrong hands, a car can be a deadly weapon," de Blasio said in a statement. "We are fighting on every front to make our streets safer, but we need Albany's help to keep dangerous drivers off the road, before we lose another life."

"This proposed legislation would provide us with additional tools to enhance safety, enforce the law and keep dangerous drivers off the street."
James P. O'Neill, NYPD commissioner

Should de Blasio's proposed changes pass in Albany, they will allow the city to install speed cameras in an additional 150 school zones and require doctors to report medical conditions and incidents that could hinder consciousness, which would be modeled after existing laws in New Jersey and other states.

The proposal also seeks to raise fines for repeat offenders within a two-year period; later offenses under the bill would also notify the driver's insurance company and suspend vehicle registration.

"This proposed legislation would provide us with additional tools to enhance safety, enforce the law and keep dangerous drivers off the street," said NYPD Commissioner James P. O'Neill.

Additionally, de Blasio announced that the final four months of the Vision Zero Dusk and Darkness initiative saw pedestrian traffic fatalities decrease by 24 percent from the previous year.

While the St. Patrick's Day Parade will take over Fifth Avenue on Saturday, it's going to also affect MTA subway, bus and rail service. ISTOCK

Here's what you need to know about MTA service on St. Patrick's Day

Don't even think about bringing any of that green beer (or any alcohol) with you on any train.

NIKKI M. MASCALI

While the St. Patrick's Day parade will take over Fifth Avenue in New York City on Saturday, it will also affect the traffic patterns of many surrounding streets — and the MTA's subway, bus and rail service.

Here's what you can expect from the MTA this St. Patrick's Day.

Subways & buses

Due to the expected crowds near the end of the parade route at 79th Street, some staircases in the nearby 77th Street 6 train station may be designated as entry/exit only on both uptown and downtown platforms.

As a friendly reminder, some subways don't have weekend service, so there will be no B trains or express 6 or 7 service; riders can take the J or Z instead.

Additionally, N service will be suspended in both directions between Astoria-Ditmars Boulevard and Times Square-42nd Street due to track work. There will be free shuttle buses between Astoria-Ditmars Boulevard and Queensboro Plaza, where straphangers can grab the 7 train.

As for buses, these routes will be detoured for the St. Patrick's Day Parade: M1, M2, M3, M4, M5, M31, M50, M55, M57, M66, M72, M79, M86, X1, X10, X17, X27, X28, BM1, BM2, BM3, BM4, BM5, BxM2, BxM3, BxM4, BxM6, BxM7, BxM8, BxM9, BxM10, BxM11, Q32 and most Staten Island Express buses.

LIRR

There will be 38 extra Long Island Rail Road trains running on Saturday. For complete schedules, visit web.mta.info/lirr/Timetable, and scroll down to the section about the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Metro-North

There will be seven extra morning trains to Grand Central on Metro-North's Harlem, Hudson and New Haven lines on Saturday, and additional trains will be on standby to depart Grand Central as needed. To view the schedule, visit mta.info/mnr.

Straphangers traveling to and from stations north of Goldens Bridge should expect delays of up to 10 minutes due to repair work from Winter Storm Quinn, which caused multiple downed power poles and lines along the tracks.

Leave the green beer at home

While you can deck yourself out in holiday attire until you're green in the face, leave the green beer — and any other alcohol — at home if you're heading to the St. Patrick's Day parade. Alcohol is banned on the LIRR and Metro-North, and any such refreshments found on your person will be confiscated by MTA police.

Get your tickets early

With two million revelers expected to attend the parade, the MTA urges riders to buy round-trip tickets in advance at their home station or through the MTA eTix app on their mobile devices.

Trump brags about making up 'facts' in trade meeting with Justin Trudeau

The Toronto Star claims President Trump is making 4.1 public false statements every day, on average. GETTY IMAGES

President Trump said he made up facts during a meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau to talk about trade, the Washington Post reported.

According to leaked audio from a Republican fundraising dinner in Missouri on Tuesday night, Trump made the admission in a speech. "Trudeau came to see me," he said. "He's a good guy, Justin. He said, 'No, no, we have no trade deficit with you, we have none. Donald, please.'

"Nice guy, good-looking guy, comes in — 'Donald we have no trade deficit.' He's very proud because everybody else, you know, we're getting killed. … So he's proud. I said, 'Wrong Justin, you do.' I didn't even know … I had no idea," Trump added. "I just said, 'You're wrong.' You know why? Because we're so stupid. … And I thought they were smart."

The United States actually has a $12 billion trade surplus with Canada, according to the Office of the United States Trade Representative.

Trump has a long and extensive history of making false statements and repeating lies. But telling an audience he did so in trade negotiations with a major ally takes that to a new level.

The Toronto Star, which has been keeping a running total of Trump's lies and false statements in office, says the president has stepped up his pace. On average, he's making 4.1 public false statements daily.

At 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Trump tried to assuage the damage with a tweet. "We do have a trade deficit with Canada, as we do with almost all countries [some of them massive]. P.M. Justin Trudeau of Canada, a very good guy, doesn't like saying that Canada has a Surplus vs. the U.S. [negotiating], but they do … they almost all do … and that's how I know!" he wrote.

Vox reported that the tweet is a lie: "According to the US Trade Representative's official statistics, the United States runs a $12 billion trade deficit in goods with Canada. That is more than offset by our $24 billion trade surplus in services, leading to a $12 billion total trade surplus. Running an overall trade deficit is not really a bad thing, and looking at particular bilateral trade balances is totally irrelevant."

RUSSIAN CYBERATTACKS

In a first, US blames Russia for cyberattacks on energy grid

The Trump administration on Thursday blamed the Russian government for a campaign of cyberattacks stretching back at least two years that targeted the U.S. power grid, marking the first time the United States has publicly accused Moscow of hacking into American energy infrastructure.

Beginning in March 2016, or possibly earlier, Russian government hackers sought to penetrate multiple U.S. critical infrastructure sectors, including energy, nuclear, commercial facilities, water, aviation and manufacturing, according to a U.S. security alert published Thursday.

The Department of Homeland Security and FBI said in the alert that a "multistage intrusion campaign by Russian government cyber actors" had targeted the networks of small commercial facilities "where they staged malware, conducted spear phishing, and gained remote access into energy sector networks." The alert did not name facilities or companies targeted.

The direct condemnation of Moscow represented an escalation in the Trump administration's attempts to deter Russia's aggression in cyberspace, after senior U.S. intelligence officials said in recent weeks the Kremlin believes it can launch hacking operations against the West with impunity.

It coincided with a decision Thursday by the U.S. Treasury Department to impose sanctions on 19 Russian people and five groups, including Moscow's intelligence services, for meddling in the 2016 U.S. presidential election and other malicious cyberattacks.

The decision by the U.S. to publicly attribute hacking attempts of critical infrastructure was "unprecedented and extraordinary," said Amit Yoran, a former U.S. official who founded DHS's Computer Emergency Response Team.

"I have never seen anything like this," said Yoran, now chief executive of the cyber firm Tenable. REUTERS

How to win tickets to 'Cursed Child'

"Harry Potter and the Cursed Child" is now play at the Lyric Theater.
MANUEL HARLAN

Here's how you can get $40 tickets to "Harry Potter and the Cursed Child."

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

"Harry Potter and the Cursed Child" has finally come to Broadway! But you'll need a bit of magic of your own to get tickets.

As of this week, the show is officially in previews at the Lyric Theater (214 W. 43rd St.), with opening night set for April 22. Alas, getting tickets will be about as easy as getting into "Hamilton." Not only that, you'll have to spend twice as much: The show is divided into two parts, so you'll need two tickets.

Luckily, there's another way.

Each Friday, the production will hold a digital ticket lottery through the TodayTix website and app.

The ticket lottery is officially called the Friday Forty, and it's pretty generous. Fans have a chance at 40 seats to every performance taking place the following week. The show is performed in full between three and five times each week, so that's at least 120 and up to 200 chances to win!

Each ticket costs $20, and you can enter to win tickets for one person ($40) or two people ($80).

Unlike ticket lotteries for other shows where your seat might be up in the balcony or in the very front row — which sounds great in theory but can be too close to the action at times — the show's producers promise that "Cursed Child"'s lottery tickets are for "some of the very best seats."

Sign onto TodayTix between 12:01 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Fridays to enter the lottery, then pet a black cat for good luck (Minerva McGonagall would approve). Winners are notified between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m., and you'll want to keep a close eye on your email all afternoon — you'll have an hour to claim your seats, or they'll be passed on to someone else.

Note that if you win for the Wednesday matinee and evening shows, you'll have to beg off work on pretty short notice. Hopefully, your boss will understand that sometimes, there are more important things in life.

Shamrock Shortbread Cookies at Bouchon Bakery PROVIDED

Green is for luck

One day a year, "eating your greens" means something very different. Green beer will be everywhere, of course, but we also found some on-theme food and drinks for St. Patrick's Day. EVA KIS

Luck of the Irish Super Sundae

For St. Patrick's Day, home of the Frrrozen Hot Chocolate Serendipity 3 has gathered every green thing in its pantries for the Luck of the Irish Super Sundae. A slice of green velvet cake and a giant scoop of mint chocolate chip ice cream are crammed into a goblet then topped with hot fudge, a green lollipop, green mint chocolate M&M's, green-apple popcorn, green twist lollipops and crushed green candy and green whipped cream ($19.95). Those feeling lucky should definitely head here: Every sundae also comes with a card for a chance at prizes like Serendipity 3 swag and gift cards. 225 E. 60th St.

Green shots on a rooftop

Starting at noon on St. Patrick's Day, Haven Rooftop (it's covered) will be doling out festive specials like green shots, $7 Guinness and The Shamrocker, an electric-green concoction made with Midori and topped with prosecco. Not Irish, but it'll do the trick! 132 W. 47th St.

Shamrock Shindig

Head to Coney Island a week before the season kicks off for a the Coney Island Brewing's Shamrock Shindig. The outdoor patio is getting a heated tent, where you'll find green tacos and hot dogs courtesy of Coney Shack paired with a couple of special brews: a take on Irish coffee that involves NY Honey Stout and a Sweet Potato Porter. 1904 Surf Ave., Brooklyn

Pot of Gold

Not into whiskey or beer? PHD Rooftop Lounge's 10-pound Mega Moscow Mule cocktail is getting a festive make-over as the enormous Pot of Gold, a 192-ounce concoction for $100. Or opt for the only-half-as-crazy Leprechaun Hat (100 oz., $45), or the individually portioned Patty's Mini Mule (16 oz., $10). If you order a Patty's between 2 and 5 p.m. on St. Patrick's Day and find a gold coin at the bottom, be ready to make some new friends: You'll get a free Leprechaun Hat cocktail. 355 W. 16th St.

The Lucky Leprechaun

Clinton Hall's three-tiered waffles are the dessert you eat as a main course. This weekend only, catch the Lucky Leprechaun: three green Belgian waffles (made with a stout-flavored batter) stuffed with scoops of chocolate ice cream, topped with mint chocolate syrup and served on a bed of candy and Lucky Charms marshmallows. Oh, and in the center is a pint glass filled with Irish coffee and whipped cream. The St. Pat's edition of the WTF Waffle is available at all three locations. clintonhallny.com

Shamrock Shortbread Cookies

Bakeries are another sure bet for green fun on St. Patrick's Day, but Bouchon Bakery has turned its entire display case green with treats like shamrock-shaped shortbread cookies (they're even dusted with gold), a stout-flavored cupcake with green cocoa butter topped with malt whipped cream, and a green-tinged chocolate-whiskey macaron. Two locations, bouchonbakery.com

‘Tomb Raider’ goes from game to reboot

Alicia Vikander and Goggins in the blockbuster WARNER BROS

Producer Graham King and the new movie’s villain, Walton Goggins, talk about the transition, as well as the new Lara Croft.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

The two most maligned types of films in Hollywood today are the video-game adaptation and the reboot.

So the fact that “Tomb Raider” is both always meant that the blockbuster was going to have to win over moviegoers. Those involved in the development of the “Tomb Raider” reboot were very much aware of this problem from the outset, though. So they cast a badass new Lara Croft, Alicia Vikander, and got to work. Metro spoke with the film’s producer and bad guy about the process — and what action movie fans can expect on screen.

Why reboot “Tomb Raider”?

Graham King: I thought we could make a genre picture that actually had a lot of heart and a lot of emotion, and showed us the rise of a young girl in London to being Lara Croft. The 2013 game felt like a modern-day film that we could play to a 2018 audience.

We didn’t want to make a bad version of a reboot. Not only because it’s a franchise, but it’s a video game franchise, too. [Those] don’t have the best reputation.

Did that concern you?

GK: We had some hurdles to overcome. But I’m hoping that we’ve paid enough homage to the game to appeal to the film, and [also] have non-video game players enjoy the story.

This was all about making a theatrical experience. That’s why it took so long to put together! To me you get one shot of rebooting a franchise, and you need to get it right. Otherwise you’re one and done.

We were all about making it as exciting as possible to a modern audience. I also wanted to stay away from “Buckingham Palace London” and show the new version of the city, and that brought a grittiness to the whole film.

Let’s talk grit.

Walton Goggins: We tried to do it a little differently — as grounded as we could. I tried to give Alicia [Vikander]’s Lara Croft real physical and real emotional obstacles to overcome.

With the advent of cable and programming over an 84-hour serialized experience, the appetite is different. There’s a place for a fun, relatively shallow interpretation of a bigger story.

And I love those movies. Give me some popcorn and gummy bears and I’m in heaven. But then … there’s a real place to go deep.

GK: That’s how we got Alicia to join the film, too. Because it was all about the story for her, and I actually told her the story before I told her it was “Tomb Raider.” Because the story and drama had the right kind of elements that appealed to her — especially the young girl in London growing up without her father and trying to find him [element].

Producer Graham King GETTY

What was it like working with Alicia?

WG: She’s very present, she’s very earnest, she’s serious (but can be liked), and I’m the same way. I loved everything about it. I just really loved that I got to work with one of the greatest actors of any generation in Alicia Vikander.

GK: What Alicia really brought to it that was so magical was the grounded-ness. Because we are with her throughout the whole film, as she hangs off a decrepit Japanese bomber, rides down the river and then bike rides through London.

“Tomb Raider” is now in cinemas.

Nick Robinson as the titular pen-pal 20TH CENTURY FOX

"Love, Simon"

Director: Greg Berlanti
Stars: Nick Robinson, Jennifer Garner

Seventeen-year-old Simon Spier (Nick Robinson) has a great life — superb friends, a close-knit family, and he's smart, funny and handsome. There's just one secret that he is keeping from everyone, though: he's closeted. But when he starts to email an anonymous classmate who's also gay, he grows more confident. Until he's suddenly blackmailed.

This movie is long overdue, not just because of the impact and influence that the story of a teenager trying to come out can have on an audience, but also because of the inherent conflict and drama that comes with such a character dilemma and plot.

What "Love, Simon" does so well, though, is make this story feel both completely familiar as well as original.

Familiar, because it is still just about a group of friends in high school trying to figure out their paths in life, making silly mistakes and struggling to find their own voices. Original, because never before has a major Hollywood studio been so open, progressive, subtle and subversive with its treatment of a gay character.

The surprising, dramatic and utterly audacious final act, which squeezes every ounce of drama, heart and pathos out its character and story is just one of the many reasons why "Love, Simon" resonates so strongly. So strongly, in fact, that it will instantly go down as a coming of age classic. GREGORY WAKEMAN

"Tomb Raider"

Director: Roar Uthaug
Stars: Alicia Vikander, Walton Goggins

Lara Croft (Alicia Vikander) has spent years trying to overcome the disappearance of her eccentric father. Now 21, her life lacks purpose and focus, while she also has to decide whether to officially declare her father dead. But several clues lead to a dangerous mission across the world to try and find out exactly what happened to him, only to discover the existence of the shadowy organization "Trinity" and an arch(eologist) rival named Mathias Vogel (Walton Goggins).

To call "Tomb Raider" the best video game adaptation of all time is arguably damning it with faint praise, as previous entries into that genre have seemingly only ever ranged from the truly underwhelming to the outrageously diabolical.

"Tomb Raider" manages to transcend these hurdles by tapping into what made the game so unique. We see Lara quickly having to use her physicality to get out of dangerous, tight spots, as well as using her smarts to get out of more drastic and spectacular situations, too.

Lara manages to escape some of these predicaments a little too easily, especially when there are guns involved, but Alicia Vikander is so adept and impressive in her role that you constantly believe and are transfixed by her portrayal.

"Tomb Raider" is splendid popcorn fodder that stays true to its source material. Which is much more than practically every other video game adaptation can say. GW

Alicia Vikander steps into Lara Croft's boots. WARNER BROS

Barkley back up for grabs for Giants?

With the first pick of the draft, the Browns may pass on Saquon Barkley after acquiring Carlos Hyde, allowing the Giants to snap him up.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Cleveland Browns continue to make moves that are toying with the hopes of New York Giants fans.

On Wednesday the Browns signed former San Francisco 49ers running back Carlos Hyde to a three-year, $15 million deal.

Hyde has shown flashes of becoming a premier back in the NFL, but inconsistencies and injuries have robbed him of any sort of withstanding success. That could come with a change of scenery in Cleveland, where he will join Duke Johnson in the backfield.

But it also could eliminate the thought of the team drafting Penn State running back Saquon Barkley with the No. 1 overall pick of the 2018 NFL Draft; something that seemed like a sure thing just a few days ago.

After an 0-16 season, the hapless Browns suddenly became the aggressors, trading for Miami Dolphins Pro-Bowl wide receiver Jarvis Landry and Buffalo Bills quarterback Tyrod Taylor. The latter deal was thought to take Cleveland out of the running for a quarterback with that first pick in a draft with plenty of first-round-caliber passers.

That left Barkley, the most impressive talent in the 2018 draft class, as the clear choice to join a suddenly dangerous-looking offense that now features Taylor under center, wide receivers Landry, Cory Coleman and Josh Gordon along with a strong offensive line.

The Giants had been very high on Barkley and he looked to be their top choice with the No. 2 pick of the draft after their dismal 3-13 campaign. However, it looked as though they would have to settle for Plan B, whether that be a quarterback for the future in Josh Allen, Sam Darnold, Josh Rosen, Baker Mayfield or Lamar Jackson, offensive lineman Quenton Nelson or defensive end Bradley Chubb.

Hyde joining Johnson in the Browns backfield though does increase the chances of Barkley "falling" into the Giants laps at No. 2. Johnson is one of the better receiving backs in the league while Hyde could flourish behind the Browns strong offensive line. And signing him to a three-year deal states the team's intentions for him as its bell-cow back.

It would be a confusing move if Barkley went No. 1 overall just for him to be used sparingly upon his arrival to the NFL.

ESPN's Pat McManamon reported that the Browns will still consider taking the Penn State product, though USA Today's Jeff Risdon believes that Cleveland is out of the Barkley sweepstakes.

As soon as the New York Mets acquired Jason Vargas in free agency last month, it was clear that a big-name starter was going to be bumped from the starting rotation barring injury.

With two weeks until Opening Day, it looks as though the race for the last spot is down to just two in Steven Matz and Zack Wheeler, a pair of arms who have struggled this spring, per MLB.com's Anthony DiComo.

As chances to impress the organization grow fewer and fewer this spring, Wheeler did not help his case to stay in the rotation on Tuesday night, allowing five runs in three innings of work. It was a disastrous answer to a promising outing against the Yankees in which he struck out four batters in three scoreless innings.

On Wednesday, Matz looked like he would be doomed to a similar outing, allowing two runs in a 33-pitch first inning in which he walked two batters and threw nine of his first 13 offerings out of the strike zone.

The lefty managed to recover though, going an additional 3.1 innings to end his day with five strikeouts.

Neither Wheelers or Matz's numbers this spring training is good.

In 10 innings of work, Matz has a 10.80 ERA with eight strikeouts and a WHIP (walks plus hits per inning pitched) of 2.20.

Wheeler has been better, but not by much. Through eight innings this spring, the righty has a 6.75 ERA with 11 strikeouts and a WHIP of 2.13.

Initially, it was believed that the odd man out of the Mets rotation would be sent to the bullpen to start the year. However, there's a very real possibility that either Wheeler or Matz could be headed to triple-A Las Vegas.

Though the minors are the more likely destination for Matz compared to Wheeler.

Per Matt Ehalt of the Record, the Mets have been "intrigued" by the prospect of Wheeler coming out of the pen. With high velocity paired with swing-and-miss capabilities, the 27-year-old has the stuff to provide the Mets with a different kind of option out of the pen. However, Wheeler expressed his reluctance to head to become a reliever when the Mets initially acquired Vargas.

"I'm just here to be a starting pitcher," Wheeler said at the time. "That's what I've always been, and that's what I'm going to be. When I'm healthy, I know I'm just as good as anybody out there."

Matz has not been viewed as that kind of option after a 2017 season in which he averaged just 6.48 strikeouts per nine innings. Had the Mets not signed the lefty Vargas, Matz might have been included in the rotation by default as the only southpaw starter available.

The problem is that Robert Gsellman and Seth Lugo, two of New York's starters over the past two years, are also expected to take on bullpen roles which will make the relief staff a crowded bunch considering the Mets already can trot out Jeurys Familia, Anthony Swarzak, AJ Ramos and Paul Sewald.

So Vegas might be the only option for one of these arms. JOE PANTORNO

Aries Unexpected information will come from a rare source. Be open to what you hear, but don't be gullible enough to think you only have one choice. Expand on what's being said.

Taurus Share your thoughts and follow through with your plans. You'll get the support you need to make a difference. A partnership will be beneficial and be considered.

Gemini Getting involved in a joint venture or helping someone who is lazy or looking for a handout should be avoided. Emotional tactics and poor choices are apparent.

Cancer You can make positive changes to the way you do things. Add a little creative flair to whatever job you are given to open a window of opportunity.

Leo An emotional mix-up will develop with someone you share expenses with. Try to sort out who pays for what. Equal responsibility is necessary.

Virgo Persuasive tactics will be used when dealing with a personal or professional partner. Listen to what's being said or offered and counter with facts and figures.

Libra Consider an unusual offer. How you earn your living or handle your money will change due to an incident that unfolds at home or work. Protect against loss and theft.

Scorpio Make plans to do something special with someone you love. Whether it's made to an older relative, or a significant other, a simple gesture will go a long way.

Sagittarius Be careful when someone gives you advice. Ulterior motives are apparent and could end up putting you in a compromising position. Empty promises should be avoided.

Capricorn You can make a financial move or change to your current profession, but don't do so for the wrong reasons or in haste. Slow down and rethink your next step.

Aquarius Talks will be confusing and lead to uncertainty. If you don't understand what someone means or wants, be specific and ask exactly what's expected of you.

Pisces Express your feelings and don't hold back if someone is doing something that you find upsetting. Don't ignore what's wrong or you will compromise your integrity EUGENIA LAST
